

Title:

Getting Started with the SDGs in Universities

Country:

 Australia

Organisation:

The Sustainable Development Solutions Network (SDSN) – Australia/Pacific

Find more here:

<https://bit.ly/3RBhQXV>

Type of tool:

A guide for Universities, Higher Education Institutions and the Academic Sector

Target group:

Universities, Higher Education Institutions, and the Academic Sector

Short description:

Getting started with the SDGs in universities outlines the key roles universities – and the higher education and academic sectors more generally – have in contributing to the United Nations (UN) Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the benefits of becoming engaged. It provides practical guidance on how to get started with deepening contributions. It offers practical guidance and tools to assist universities to engage with the SDGs, including how to map existing activities, how to engage with stakeholders, and how to report on SDG contributions.

Why use it:

The guide helps to understand how universities can contribute to implementing the SDGs through their core functions of education, research, operations and external leadership.

Topics covered in the tool:

Sustainability, Stakeholder involvement, Education